

A wine list inspired by green innovation. The list features wines from around the world that have converted to organic or biodynamic sustainable farming practices.

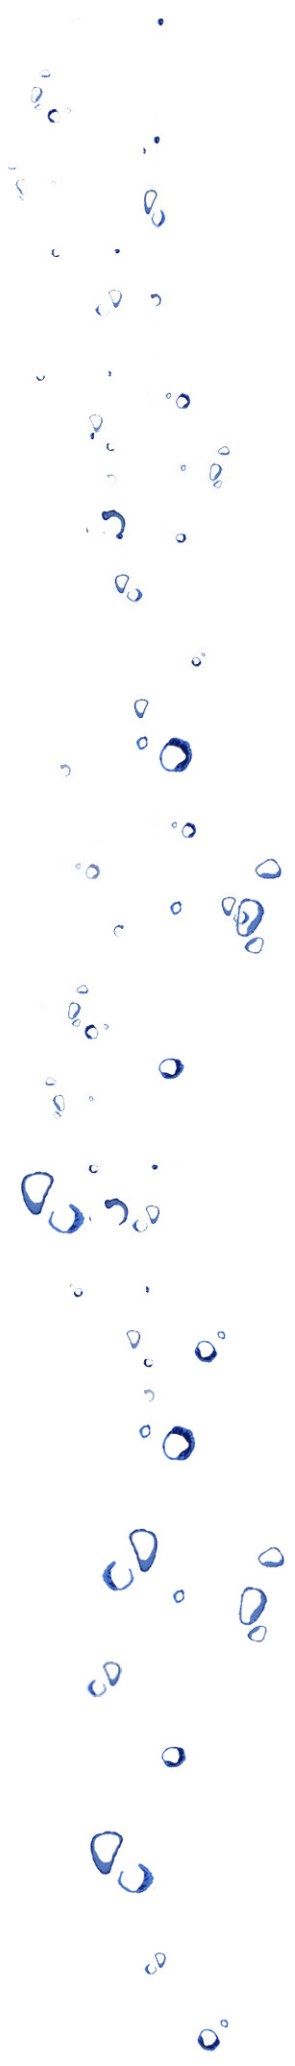

The cornerstone of organic farming is the soil. Maintaining a healthy, biologically active soil is the main objective for an organic farmer. In the vineyard it means cultivating the soil and planting cover crops, instead of applying herbicides. It means using natural fertilizers, such as animal compost, versus chemical fertilizers, with no use of synthetic growth-regulators. The organic alternative to chemical controls is to encourage natural predators of insect pests instead of using poisonous insecticides. Organic farmers promote "biodiversity" and allow plants other than vines to grow in and around the vineyard.

Biodynamic farming, on the other hand, is in effect, a supercharged system of organic farming. The key to Biodynamics is considering the farm in its entirety as a living system, closed off and self-sustaining. Biodynamics also sees the farm in the context of the wider pattern of lunar and cosmic rhythms. In this holistic view, it differs significantly in practice from organic, from the use of special ceremonial like preparations to the timing of their application. However, in other ways, the techniques employed are quite similar.

Sustainable farming refers to the ability of a vineyard to produce grapes indefinitely, without causing severe or irreversible damage to ecosystem health, or cause long term soil damage.
