CELEBRITY "QUOTES"

Martinez, California claims to be the "Birthplace of the Martini".

Sir Winston Churchill made Martinis by pouring Gin into a pitcher and glancing briefly at a bottle of Vermouth across the room.

Humphrey Bogart's last words supposedly were, "I should never have switched from Scotch to Martinis".

W.C. Fields started the day with two double Martinis before breakfast, "Angels' Milk" he called them. Then he put down a glass of Pineapple juice, a piece of toast and another Martini.

"You can no more keep a Martini in the refrigerator than you can keep a kiss there. The proper union of Gin and Vermouth is a great and sudden glory; it is one of the happiest marriages on earth and one of the shortest lived.

The fragile tie of ecstasy is broken in a few minutes, therefore, there can be no re-marriage."

Bernard De Voto, Harpers, 1969.
